Langley Winds

The United States Air Force Heritage of America Band's Langley Winds woodwind quintet will span more than 250 years of musical tradition when they appear at (place) for a free performance (date) at (time). The quintet's repertoire includes a wide variety of chamber works as well as popular and patriotic pieces.

The quintet's versatility stems from their diverse educational backgrounds and professional experiences. They hold degrees from music schools all over the country including West Virginia University, North Carolina School of the Arts, Queen's College in New York City, Butler University, the University of Michigan, Baylor University and the University of New Mexico. Members have performed with such orchestras as the Macon Symphony, St. Louis Philharmonic, Waco Symphony, Virginia Symphony, Southwest Symphony Orchestra, West Virginia Symphony Orchestra, Brockton Symphony, Broadway Chamber Orchestra, Santa Ana Symphony and the Aspen Music Festival.

Comprised of flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon, the quintet is suited to perform in such varied venues as schools, museums, hospitals, and formal concert halls. The music presented is varied enough to suit the tastes of all audiences. Additionally, the quintet presents clinics and master classes at the elementary, secondary and collegiate levels.
